 Note—We have necessarily changed the name of our guide to the above

No travel Guide is perfect! The changing conditions as all know, contribute to this condition, particularly in the United States.

The listings in this Guide are carefully checked and, despite this, past experiences have shown that our minute inspection had failed to notice errors which would be an inconvenience to the traveller. Therefore, at this point may we emphasize that these listings are printed just as they are presented to us and we would like your cooperation and understanding, that the publishers are not responsible for miscalculations or errors after this check has been made.

We appreciate letters from you, our patrons, donating advice and addresses of places not listed herein, that would be in accord with our level. We also welcome adverse criticism, in that, it might improve our standards, and, in the end, afford more comfortable conditions for you and others.

This Guide Book is not sold on newsstands but in bookstores. They make appreciative gifts to friends and neighbors. Inasmuch as the sale of these Guide Books depend mostly upon the friend-to-friend oral advertising system, it would be particularly interesting if more of our patrons would pass the word along concerning our "Green Book".

New Orleans

The city which is distinguished from other American cities by its semi-tropical climate, its historical heritage, and its French Quarter, is located 110 miles from the mouth of the Mississippi River. The river being largely responsible for the founding of the city — making New Orleans the trading post of the entire Mississippi valley; the river provided the harbor which along with its proximity to the Mexican Gulf and the World's sea lanes, enabled it to vie for the position of one of the foremost American ports, leading up to becoming the capitol of the United States trade with Latin America.

New Orleans is only one foot above sea level, and is several feet below the high water level of the Mississippi. Only its levees, keep the river from washing away. However, after the flood of 1927 the Bonnett Carre' Spillway was constructed a few miles above the city, so that now — whenever the river threatens the artificial banks that keep it harnessed, the gates of the Spillway are opened and the excess water is diverted into Lake Pontchartrain north of the city, from which it finds its way into the Gulf.

New Orleans has its rainfall problems. The city's annual precipitation, is greater than that of any other large city in the United States, except Mobile and Miami.

Since natural drainage is non-existent, huge pumps located in pumping stations at strategic points, are used to keep the city habitable.

JACKSON SQUARE

COURTYARD — NEW ORLEANS

Here is a corner of one of New Orleans' many charming outdoor courtyards found in the celebrated French Quarter. The crumbling brick walls and clinging vines offer mute reminder of the colorful days gone by.

Many of the courtyards are open for tourists inspection and these fragrant bits of gardens scattered about the old city are ever a source of interest to visitors.

Despite this precautionary arrangement, some of the citizens of New Orleans keep small row boats in their back yards, they have experienced the breaking down of these pumps from over hardening. New Orleans is flat — having no natural points of height from whence it can be seen—therefore the tallest of these steeples of the St. Louis Cathedral on Jackson Square, is the only point affording a clear clean view of the city. But because of the six long flights of wooden stairs that spiral upward into sharp dark curves, the steeple is closed to visitors.

New Orleans and its outlying Parishes are noted for its fabulous old mansions with thin old moss covered oak trees, meeting across its wide avenues. The moss that one sees still clinging to the trees, is a parisite and was brought in from Spain. It can be found any place the Spanish settled.

Most tourists, when planning a trip to New Orleans immediately think of the famed old French Quarter and New Orleans as being synonymous — however this is not so. The French Quarter consists of approximately one square mile of traditional old houses with their fine display of wrought-iron balconies, its gardens, memories and legends. It contains some of the most interesting architecture to be found in America. The character of any city is determined by the collective peculiarities of its inhabitants. Along with such things as climate and geography. In New Orleans the most influential factor was the people who lived in the French Quarter when it comprised the entire city.

These people established the cultural pattern which gives New Orleans the personality which sets it apart from other cities in the United States. New Orleans stretching out along the Atlantic sea coast became a melting pot for peoples of several nationalities; being Spaniards, Frenchmen, Italians and British. These immigrants were absorbed, by the numerically overwhelming French, thereby introducing what is known as Creoles (the original meaning — anyone of French or Spanish descent born in the French or Spanish Colony). This explanation of course is controversial.

VIEUX CARRE — NEW ORLEANS

BALCONY IRONWORK

In the French Quarter stands the largest French market — which displays a bewildering selection of fruits and vegetables. This market remains open for evening shoppers.

Here one finds peoples of all classes drinking coffee and rubbing elbows in casual familiarity.

New Orleans is noted for the best cuisine in the world, because her soil produces many rare spices. The old Creole women still sit on the ground with a stone dish and mallet and pound bay leaves for Feilee, a powder used to make one type of Gumbo — a famous New Orleans dish.

New Orleans is a Catholic city having a full week of feast, festivities and gayety. It is wide open, anything is allowed except murder which also happens. On Ash Wednesday all of the gayety turns into the most sacred forty days of fasting and praying, some really believe the solemnity surpasses Rome, the Eternal Holy City. There is no meat in the butcher shops on High Holy Fast Days and no parties in the homes without a City Hall permit.

One of its famous institutions, its Mardi Gras (A Catholic Holiday which marks the coming of Lent) originated in the French Quarter, masked balls and street masking — where costumes of every description may be seen; some beautiful, others frightfully grotesque, all worn in the spirit of fun. At the stroke of mid-night on the day of the festivities which ends abruptly — the streets quickly clear and all becomes quiet and orderly — for Lent has begun.

To get in one of the Mardi Gras Balls, they must know your grandparents and what they stood for. It is much easier to get into Buckingham Palace than it is to be invited to the Young Men's Illinois and the Old Men's Illinois, they are out of the question. The Bunches and Young Men 20, all of these are the outstanding clubs of the city.

This Carnival is permitted by the city authorities. It is a custom to which the old citizens were and their present descendants are, much attached. Mardi Gras Day is a city-wide holiday and is participated in by all classes, and is the only masked folk festival in the United States.

There are also other places listed as churches presided over by members of both White and Negro who claim to be touched with "the spirits" and who practice faith healing (Voodism). There are many drug stores that still do illicit business in Voodoo powders, and charms.

Catholic Negroes in New Orleans:

The largest of the Negro Catholic Churches in the United States is Corpus Christi, the center of a Parish of 12,000 Negroes. Located in the section of the city which was once all white, the church for a long time was largely attended by whites. Today Corpus Christi has a spacious rectory and a large modern school. Out of Corpus Christi, other Parishes sprung. Four outstanding Sisterhoods were started in New Orleans but today only the Order of the Holy Family exists, teaching in general schools and serving many institutions.

New Orleans has fine Universities and colleges, two of these being Dillard, one of the outstanding Universities of the United States. And Xavier University the only Catholic College for Negroes in the country.

King Zulu And Some Of His Subjects

New Orleans Musical Traditions:

The French Opera House, which was constructed in 1859 was comparable to the great Metropolitan Opera House of New York. Here the great Madam Adeline Patti made her debut. However, New Orleans' foremost contributions to the world of music is jazz.

Memphis and Alabama's W. C. Handy and Beale St. on Saturday night, are all so closely associated with New Orleans, up and down the river on this Capitol river boat, with Fate Williams at the keys of the Caliope, that could be heard all over the city.

In late years he was called the best piano player in America; before Henry Moter came along, being a younger man with a new style in piano moods, out-moded Fate.

One of New Orleans most famous of jazz, the great trumpeter — Louis Armstrong, who has perhaps influenced more musicians as for style than any other artist in his field, is at the age of fifty — still holding his own.

New Orleans, The Dreamer's Delight:

All in all, any visitor who goes to this great city with an open mind to enjoy all that it has to offer — should be rewarded.

LITTLE THEATER COURTYARD

The courtyard of the Little Theater in New Orleans is one of the show places of the New Orleans French Quarter. In spring the court is a riot of color when the blossoms of the many tropical plants come into bloom.

The center of the court is a fountain and pool and the crumbling brick walls are laced with flowering vines.
